ALASKA NEGLECTED

TERRITORY ASKS THAT CONSIDERATION BE SHOWN HER.

HAS GROWING AND IMPORTANT INTERESTS

Difficulties of Transportation Almost Prohibit Enterprise and Reforms in Government Are Sadly Needed.

A BILL is now before congress aimed at remedying some of the ills under which patient Alaska has been suffering while Uncle Sam has forgotten her in concern over matters of perhaps less importance. "The governor of Alaska is little more than a figurehead, while most of the administrative functions fall upon the judge or come under their supervision. United States commissioners and deputy marshals, appointed by the judges, have direct control of the natives," and inasmuch as these officers are paid mainly by fees they are led to adopt methods for securing business which are exceedingly unpleasant to read of." And not only is Alaska in sore need of reform in government, but she stands sadly in need of good roads, and, deciding that patience has ceased to be a virtue, she is strenuously endeavoring to secure federal aid in this matter.

A recent investigator reports that transportation is hopelessly inadequate for the present needs of the country, to say nothing of the conditions discouraging future development. Gold mining is carried on in the face of excluding the latter's colonial possessions. Dr. Sheldon Jackson introduced reindian as a partial solution, and this helped out matters for the natives. But now in the days of gold-fever and desire for rapid enterprise, the land cries aloud for roads, roads, both railways and wagon-roads. Such loss of life, retarding of advancement, delay of development, Alaska experiences today because of her trackless expanse of territory.

The member of the Harriman expedition that wrote on the resources of Alaska declares that it is not a country for agriculture nor for home-making, and says, with brevity, "few people go to Alaska to live, they go merely to stay until they have made their stake." But the present rate of increase of even a temporary population indicates that the demand for fair transportation will grow in strength. The census of 1900 gives a population of 63,592, nearly double that of ten years previous. The increase has been almost entirely due to the whites pouring into the Yukon, numbers not mounting at such a rapid rate in southern Alaska. And it goes without saying that the new pioneers will want to get about speedily, will want commerce to move with swiftness. The day is not far off when there must be abandoned the Chilkoot Indians, the horses and burros, dogs and sleds, used for transporting means between points on waterways. And the danger of shooting rapids, passing through narrow canyons, must give way to some less exciting manner of travel.

And if in time this temporary population is replaced by permanent settlers, then our government will be forced to continual remembrance of her northernmost territory. It is wrong to think of Alaska as given over entirely to arctic cold, arctic perils, arctic products. It was once thought that the only valuable part of the terrible odds, and there is most urgent requirement that the government step in and make possible better means of communication. The Canadian government has found it practicable to build good roads in that region, and her example should be followed by her neighbor who boasts of his enterprise. President Roosevelt in his last message laid much stress on conditions and needed reforms in "our Siberia," and this arctic possession may congratulate itself that such a strenuous individual is taking an interest in its welfare. We shall expect ere long to see something doing for Alaska.

Settlers as well as the native portion of the population need protection. One that pleads the urgent need of a territorial form of government for Alaska declares that practically only in the mining regions are to be found any inducements for settlers and says there seems to be no safeguard for any enterprise except that secured by patents for mining claims. Year after year Alaskans have waited to see in each president's message any mention of Alaska beyond that of the vexed boundary question, and year after year have been forced to the conclusion of Uncle Sam's indifference.

It has been argued at times that indifference has given way to some slight show of interest, that it would be a difficult matter to make rules suitable for a population made up so largely of a people differing widely in language and customs from the whites. It has been advocated that for some time to come the natives be left in the hands of the missionaries, who shall fit them to become citizens. In answer to this Alaskans urge the right arm of the law is needed to protect and assist these missionaries, that the natives must be made to understand he has a government that in addition to its duty to protect him has full power to see he obeys its laws.

The missionary has been a strong influence in Alaskan affairs, and the Alaskan missionary has been, and is, possessor of unusual zeal, integrity and wisdom. The government has grown to expect double duty of the missionary, looking to him to be the spiritual guide and teacher of the people, and leaving to him the settlement of disputes among his simple people.

Dr. Sheldon Jackson is known, even among outsiders ignorant as a rule of smallest detail of Alaskan life, as one that has done much to uplift the native, a staunch and trusted friend of the Alaskan. One missionary, an Episcopalian, not long ago established a mission station in a distant and lonely point on the Yukon river, and a part of his equipment was a specially made thermometer that could register 90 degrees below zero F. To-day there are mission stations from St. Michael's all along the route to the gold fields. All hail to the missionary who makes such plucky effort to do something for neglected Alaska.

Transportation is a most serious question in this thinly settled land of wide extent—Alaska has an area equal to one-sixth that of the United States

Alaska purchase was the fur, whale-oil and seal business; then the gold fields overshadowed in importance any other Alaskan wealth; and some future day what are now her latent resources may become the chief wealth of Alaska. Mr. Gannett, of the Harriman expedition, adds his voice to the declaration that Alaska's natural resources are enormous. "The skins and furs, the gold, copper and coal, and the timber of the territory are in value almost beyond calculation, and the mere reaping of this harvest sown and ripened for us by nature will occupy an industrial army for years."

One that writes more enthusiastically, if less authoritatively, Mr. B. W. James, refers to the attractions of this country. "In the future there will be many who will prefer Alaska or Dakota to Florida and vice versa. As far as my own experience led me to observe it was lovely and healthful. I can see no reason why a tract of land teeming with wealth should be neglected by government and people alike. From the mines of silver and gold, from the mighty forests of cedar and pine, from the beautiful furs of seal and otter, from the great fisheries of seal, whale, salmon and cod, from the enormous, inexhaustible supply of pure ice, comes the one voice: Give us the protection of an interested government, and we will not only support ourselves, but will return to the United States a revenue many times multiplying the amount of her investment by purchase of the district of Alaska."

NORMAN CUTTING.

The Acme of Bathos.

"When I was in London last summer," said Miss Eleanor Robson, "I read an advertisement in a paper that was the acme of bathos. As near as I can recollect it the wording was like this: "If this should meet the eye of Emma D., who absented herself last Wednesday from her father's house, she is implored to return, when she will be received with undiminished affection by her almost heartbroken parents. If nothing can persuade her to listen to their joint appeal—should she be determined to bring their gray hairs with sorrow to the grave—should she never mean to revisit a home where she passed so many happy years, it is at least expected, if she be not totally lost to all sense of propriety, that she will without a moment's delay send back the key of the tea caddy."—N. Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 20.—For four hours the wholesale district, bounded by Georgia and Meridian streets, Jackson place and the Union depot sheds, were menaced by a fire which started in the wholesale warehouses, of the Fahuley & McCrea Millinery Co.

At 9:30 o'clock three general alarms brought into action every department in the city and suburbs. When the fire was brought under control eight buildings, among which were three hotels, had been completely destroyed, causing a loss estimated at $1,100,000.

GEN. STOESSSEL.

Lieut. Below Characterizes Him As a Coward.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 20.—Aboard the steamer Tartar, which arrived here, were Lieuts. Below and Bondy, officers of the Russian cruiser Sevastopol, captured at the fall of Port Arthur. They were released by the Japanese after giving their parole. The captain of the Sevastopol and a number of other prisoners recently released are expected to reach San Francisco shortly. Lieut. Below characterizes Gen. Stoessel as a coward. "The world will know Stoessel as he is," said Below. "He is a coward. Stoessel was burrowed a great deal of the time in a cave. The real heroine was Madame Zouhonnell, who, when her husband was killed, took command of a battery of three 11-inch guns at a point commanding the water supply and held them until she was also killed."

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—According to a dispatch from Mukden, special reports have been received at that place stating the surrender of Port Arthur occurred against the wishes of most officers of the garrison.

THE DYING CONGRESS.

Effort to Be Made to Consider the Statehood Bill in Conference.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The senate this week will consider the motion to appoint conferences on the joint statehood bill. The general understanding is that this action will prevail and that the bill will go to conference. In case the committee recedes from the important senate amendments a sharp contest probably will ensue.

Nothing but absolutely necessary legislation is the order in the house for the week. This legislation so far as can be indicated in advance will consist of the completion of the naval appropriation bill on Monday and consideration of the river and harbor and sundry civil appropriation bills, a program which will occupy the week.

The statehood bill is to be considered in conference, but there is nothing to indicate that an agreement will be reached before the session is in its last moments.

The public buildings bill is to be a matter of contest between the committee on rules and those members of the house who are enthusiastic in its support.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

Senator Fisher Received a Telegram From the Financier.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 20.—A telegram received by Senator Fisher, member of the legislative committee investigating the Standard Oil corruption charges contained in the Elliott letter, from Thomas W. Lawson, Boston, states: "I would do anything possible to wipe 'Standard Oil' and the 'system' from the face of the earth. The people of West Virginia, as elsewhere, can depend upon me now or any time to do any and everything in my power to free them from the devilish oppression of these things."

The committee of which Fisher is a member has finished taking evidence but has not yet made its report.

Mrs. Chadwick's Wealth.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 20.—Collector of Customs Leach has so minutely traced the operations of Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick during the last four years that he is in a position to know that she has saved from her many financial transactions $1,000,000 in cash and $150,000 in jewels.

House Conducted Memorial Services.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Sitting in special session, the house of representatives conducted memorial services in tribute to the memory of the late Senator Matthew Stanley Quay, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Dalzell presided.

To Teach Hygiene and Temperance.

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—The women members of the Anti-Alcoholic League are contemplating visits to workshops and large factories for the purpose of instructing operatives in matters of hygiene and temperance.

AMUSEMENTS.

"QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER."

It is estimated that the great rural drama, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," has been witnessed by more than a million persons, and at the rate the play is drawing this season the two million mark is likely to be reached before the season closes.

So widely has the fame of this story extended the name of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" has long been accepted as a household word—one that stands for fun, fact and fancy. There is more fun in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" than ever put into a single play before.

It is a credit to the public's taste that it takes so kindly to this clean wholesome drama of New England life which is individual among all rural plays because of its fidelity to nature and absence of old-time features.

The production is to be seen here on Thursday, February 23, at the Paris Grand, and the story of the young city man in the country who courts a country girl, goes to singing schools, sleigh rides and husking bees, fights the town bully and figures in many more experiences, will want to be seen by all who wish a few hours of genuine amusement.

"THE FORTUNE TELLER."

Some idea of the magnitude of the production of "The Fortune Teller," which is being presented this season under the direction of Milton and Sargent Abron can be gathered from the fact that there are no less than twenty-three changes of costume for the chorus. The production which the Messrs. Abron are using is known to be a most elaborate one for it is the original production which was used by Alice Neilsen and they have added to it. Miss Neilsen spent more than $40,000 on the mountings of the opera. The organization is a large one numbering in its entirety sixty people, and is made up of artists of know ability and reputation. "The Fortune Teller" is booked to appear at the Paris Grand on Monday evening, February 27.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Hyomei Cures This Common and Disagreeable Disease.

Hyomei cures catarrh by the simple method of breathing it into the air passages and lungs. It kills the germs of the catarrhal poison, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane, enters the blood with the oxygen and kills the germs present there, effectually driving the disease from the system.

If you have any of the following symptoms, catarrhal germ are at work somewhere in the mucous membrane of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes or tissues of the lungs:

offensive breath	discharge from the nose dryness of the nose	stoppage of the nose pain across the eyes	aching of the body pain in back of the head	droppings in the throat pain in front of the head	mouth open while sleeping tendency to take cold	ticking back of the palate burning pain in the throat	formation of crusts in the nose hawking to clear the throat	dryness of the throat in the morning pain in the chest	loss of strength a cough	spasms of coughing stitch in side	cough short and hacking losing of flesh	cough worse night and morning variable appetite	loss in vital force raising of frothy mucus	a feeling of tightness across the chest expectorating yellow matter	upper part of the chest difficulty in breathing frequent sneezing huskiness of voice

Hyomei will cure the disease, destroy activity of all germ life in the respiratory organs, enrich and purify the blood and additional ozone, and after a few days use of this treatment the majority of these symptoms will have disappeared. In a few weeks the cure will be complete.

Catarrh or catarrhal colds cannot exist when Hyomei is used. This is a strong statement, but Clarke & Co. emphasize it by agreeing to refund you money if Hyomei does not cure.

THE FAIR.

Build Up Home Industries.

If you are interested in building up home industries, ask for brooms made at our Paris Broom Factory. A Paris housekeeper told us a few days ago that she quit trading with a certain retail grocer because he did not handle Paris made brooms. It takes that kind of spirit to build up a city. Brooms manufactured in Paris cost no more than brooms made away from home and the wages paid at this factory all goes into the pockets of Paris people.

A Tedious and Big Job.

The Fiscal Court has appointed Squires Barlow, Ball and Anderson a committee to make arrangements with Circuit Clerk C. E. Butler to re-index, re-cross index, re-number and re-box all of the records of his office. This means one of the biggest jobs ever undertaken by a single person in Paris, when one looks at the amount of work to be done. The first case filed in the Bourbon Circuit Court was in 1786, and they number up to this time 46,300. The committee, accompanied by Clerk Butler and Deputy County Clerk Pearce Paton visited the Fayette Clerk's office the other day to look over their methods. The records in County Clerk's office in Fayette had just been finished in an up-to-date manner, and to show the enormity of the work it had taken three years of continuous labor to complete the job, the Fayette Fiscal Court making an allowance of $15,000 for the work. We feel safe in saying that if our efficient Clerk is given the job, that Bourbon county will have the most complete and up-to-date Circuit Clerk's office in Kentucky.

K. of P. Commemorative Anniversary.

The Commemorative Anniversary of Rathbone Lodge and A. J. Lovely Uniform Rank K. of P. of this city, was celebrated with appropriate services at the M. E. Church, Sunday night. The former was established February 19, 1894, and the latter February 19, 1878. A special choir for the occasion rendered beautiful music, and Miss Annie Bruce McClure sang, "O Divine Redeemer," in the very sweetest manner. After the opening of the session by the usual lodge forms by Chancellor Commander J. L. Earlywine and prayer by Prelate C. B. Mitchell, the meeting was turned over to Rev. J. L. Clark, who delivered an appropriate and most excellent address. It was full of sound and good advice, insisting that only a true man made a true and worthy Knight.

After the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," Rev. Clark dismissed the large and appreciative audience with prayer and benediction.

The Lowest Price Ever.

One hundred pairs of Ladies' Shoes, regular price $3, $3.50 and $4, for $1.50; to make room for Spring goods. GEO. MCWILLIAMS.

L. & N. Contemplates Big Improvements.

The L. & N. Railroad has an option on 25 acres of land belonging to Warren A. Bacon at the junction of the Lexington and Richmond branches in this city. A deal is also on to purchase the land further down, including Claysville and Baconsville, on the west side of the main track. This purchase, if made, will be used for extensive additional yard room, and the probable removal of the L. & N. shops to Paris.

If we only had a live Commercial Club here to take up this contemplated removal of the shops to Paris by the L. & N. something might be done. Why sit still like a lot of bumps on a log and let all of the good things go by without making an effort to secure a one of them. If Paris could secure these shops it would mean thousands of dollars into the pockets of the merchants every month.

ATTENTION is called to advertisement in another column of Roberts & Anderson. They have their opening to-morrow (Wednesday.) Everybody invited.

Rural Route Directory.

There will be issued from this office in the near future a complete Rural Route Directory. Those wishing one can leave their name at THE NEWS office. It is our intention to make this directory complete in every detail and will be printed in book form.

In addition to the six routes already established, and which are to be materially changed, five new routes are to be added, viz: Three from Paris, one each from Hutchison and North Middletown, respectively. Our new Directory will contain all of the eleven routes, and will be an invaluable guide to the business men and merchant.

An Enthusiastic Meeting.

By the enthusiasm displayed at the meeting of the ladies at Mrs. Clifton Arasparger's, Friday afternoon, the movement to have a hospital in Paris will be a successful one. The ladies organized by electing Mrs. E. F. Clay, Sr., President; Mrs. Wm. Myall, vice-President; Miss Gertrude Renick, Secretary, and Mrs. John T. Hinton, Sr., Treasurer. A number of important committees were appointed and they are going to work like business women, knowing no such word as fail. Another meeting will be held Friday afternoon, at 2:30 with Mrs. J. T. Hinton, Sr., and all are invited to be present and take a hand in this good work.

All of the physicians of Paris will be at the meeting Friday afternoon at Mrs. Hinton's.

Ex-Confederate Burial To-day.

The remains of Mr. Thos. McIntyre will be taken from the vault in the Paris cemetery to-day (Tuesday) at 2 o'clock, and interred in the Confederate lot by the side of his old comrades. It will be remembered that Mr. McIntyre died at St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington, several weeks ago, and on account of the severe weather at the time his remains were placed in the vault. He is a brother of Mrs. Nannie Ransdall, of this city.

UNDER THE WILLOWS.

I see the dear old farmhouse and the swards that round it lay; I see the apple orchard and the gray-brown ricks of hay;
I see the current bushes fringing fragrant fields of wheat—Aye, all the rustic pictures mem'ry brings to me are sweet, E'en to the hazel bushes that I robbed each glowing fall;
But just beyond the culvert was the dearest spot of all:
'Twas there the grand old willows, that I still distinctly see, Stood, sifting golden sunshine through their lacy tops for me.

There, prone beside the singing stream, I lay and gazed in awe At all the weird, wide wonder world my wondering child eyes saw; Between me and a turquoise sky with alabaster clouds
The spider sailers spun their strands and furred their filmy shrouds; I saw, in that enchanted realm of azure, green and white
The golden-coated orioles that twittered joy's delight
While fashioning a dwelling place to rear their unborn brood, That soon would spread their yellow beaks and clamor for their food.

Then, gazing past the willow world with youth's unbridled eyes, I turned each silver cloud into a palace in the skies;
Each palace held a stately king that none but I could see;
The bits of cloud that broke away were charlots sent for me, Sometimes a snow-white fairy clad in shining robes of mist Would beckon to me with her wand—I never could resist; Then off to Fairyland 'd went float, and wondrous sights we'd see—Till some one came and woke me up to call me in to tea.

I love that dear old farmhouse and the
swards that round it lay;
I love the apple orchard and the gray-
brown ricks of hay;
The current-bordered pathway fringing fragrant fields of wheat—Aye, all the rustic pictures mem'ry brings
to me are sweet,
E'en to the stunted hazels that I robbed
each glowing fall;
But just beyond the culvert is the dearest spot of all:
There stand the grand old willows that I still distinctly see,
And sit, as then, the sunshine through their lacy tops for me.

A STORY OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC

By GEN. CHARLES KING
Author of "Norman Holt," "The Colonel's Daughter," "Fort Frayne," etc.

CHAPTER VIII.—CONTINUED.

Five seconds more and the error was discovered. Chilton and his platoon had taken the wrong road somewhere south of Chantilly and, instead of rejoining their squadron, had stumbled on the pickets. There was more or less soldier recrimination, but, quickly as possible, the wounded officer was borne in a blanket to a neighboring farmhouse, and a trooper galloped to Gainesville for a surgeon. Ladue spent a sleepless and miserable night, was exonerated by his division commander and Stuart when the matter was investigated next day, but was so utterly broken up over the affair that permission was given him to go back again and remain with Chilton until he could be moved.

Ladue, nearly mad with misery, was hopelessly awaiting the coming of an ambulance on the third day when his patient suddenly took a turn for the worse. The division surgeon said it would be a serious matter to take him that long ride back to Warrenton and suggested Ladue's going over to the home of Judge Armistead at Hopewell and arranging to have the lad moved thither. This was on the eighth of March, and up to noon they had no sign of soldiers coming from the east or north.

So Paul had gone, never counting on Chilton's taking the bit in his teeth.
And when late at night he returned to Thornton, weak and weary, he was aghast to learn that with only his body servant and a trooper nurse, Chilton had started southward in the wagon that evening by the Sudley road, bent on escaping from the heralded advance of the union blue. Despite fatigue and failing strength, Ladue followed, caught them at the Henry house, and was within that historic wreck, consulting the owner as to the best roads to follow while the farm wagon, with its solitary escort was toiling up the slope from the crossing of the pike, then all on a sudden there came a cloud of blue-jacketed, yellow-trimmed troopers sweeping across the field from the southeast, and Mr. Henry had barely time to hide his visitor under the flooring of the garret when they were frowningly by the dozen and jovially swarming all over the premises.

Another moment, too, and they had surrounded the wagon with its helpless load. Then Averell himself had ridden up to investigate, and one of his first orders was that the Henry house and grounds were to be protected against all possibility of pillage and vandalism.

So it had happened that for two days Paul Ladue lay concealed within the Henry house—once when the guard was changed hearing voices he recognized as those of men he well knew in his western home.

And again the word was passed from the sentries at the front: "Here comes the general!" and while the guard sprang to their stacked arms, Paul Ladue, crouching sadly in the little garret, crept to the westward side and peered through a crevice at the coming cavalade.

All in the uniform of their rank, in frock coats, belts and sashes, gauntlets and forage caps, with regulation horse equipments—the general and his little staff made gallant show as they breasted the slope. There were only five in all, with three orderlies and no escort, but in three of the five Ladue saw the faces of men whom he had looked up to, honored and esteemed, while the face of the fourth was that of the faithful and devoted friend whom he had loved as David loved Jonathan.
Ladue threw himself upon the floor, so sick at heart that it was a relief to sob like a homesick child.

And so Henry found him, when in his stocking feet, a little later, he climbed the ladder to the loft with wonderous news. Dr. Chilton and his daughter were coming—were even then on their way from Warrenton.

Much of the early morning of the following day he spent with Rosalie by the side of the wounded boy. Now that Dr. Chilton had gone on in search of the commanding general, hopeful of permission to take his crippled soldier home, the vital question arose, What was to become of Paul? He had no excuse for parole. He had not been grievously wounded. He was there of his own volition, undiscovered, within the hostile lines, and, though wearing his new and natty uniform and in no sense a spy, still, the lot of southern prisoner in northern hands was a problem yet unsolved. Then Rosalie Chilton, the daring, quick-witted girl, planned the escape so successfully effected.

Little luggage had she brought with her on that hurried journey, but, soon as it was dusk, she doffed the gown and skirt she wore—even the crinoline, at period of our national life regarded as indispensable to the wardrobe of the gentlewoman—then donned a soft wrapper, and ten minutes later, Paul Ladue, shorn of his new uniform, was attiring himself aloft in the traveling dress of a Virginia belle. He well-nigh ruined the whole plan—and crinoline—by putting his foot through the filmy cage as he searched the stairway, but from the floor below came ominous "Hush-sh-sh!" in Rosalie's tragic tones, and she shook him almost savagely while giving some finishing touches to his toilet. "How dare you be so careless with my best hoop-skirt, sir?
Don't you know that's almost the very last one in Virginia?" Then, duly informed as to the paths in the garden and the exits through the fence, with her shawl over his head and a prayer on her trembling lips she sent him forth, and Jim Ferguson, officer of the guard, bowed to her representative with killing grace—and let him go.

Half an hour later Paul had shed his skirts at the stone house, had had a whispered word with Jennings—he of the subsequent demijohn—and, in some old clothes of that worthy and with a note to a farmer friend back of Grove-town, was away en route to Hopewell.
By nine he was in saddle, with a horse borrowed of the farmer friend; by ten he had learned that Judge Armistead was at Gainesville, having reached the Thornton farm too late, and there were they both—judge and lieutenant—when the little ambulance train came along in the morning.

Such was the story of Ladue's escape from within the union lines. But the story that agitated at least three men was that of Rosalie Chilton. Why should she have essayed her perilous masquerade? Why should she have left her brother and, in the dress of a confederate officer, before the last of the yankees were clear of the plateau, before Stuart's fellows were sure of the Sudley road—why should she have dared that night dash down to the pike? Even in his battered condition Fred Benton found himself pondering over the problem, for he had heard her father urging her to explain—had heard her implore that father not to press the question now.

CHAPTER IX. ESCAPE POSSIBLE.

It is by no means a far cry from Manassas to Charlottesville as one takes the swift flight in the cozy parlor car of to-day, but it was a different thing in '61, bumping, banging, behind some wheezy old wood-burner, in ram-shackle open platform car; yet it was almost heavenly, after two days' tossing and tumbling over the ruts of the Virginia roadways.

It was a soft spring morning that saw the genial doctor's little party entrained at the Rappahannock.
Scores of sympathetic fellows in confederate gray surrounded the car to which Lieut. Chilton was borne and into which Fred Benton, his arm in a sling and his head still in bandages, was carefully guided. For reasons not then made known to his Yankee patient, the doctor persisted in treating his case as far more serious than conditions seemed to warrant. Constantly he strove to impress upon Benton the necessity of lying still and speaking as little as possible. Rosalie, too, was forever holding up a tapering finger in warning and pursing her soft, rosy lips in very significant "hush" when he ventured to ask questions or show a disposition to stir. Otherwise she had but little to say to him, and our wounded Badger boy had enjoyed the doubtful bliss of watching her hour after hour during the long wait at the Junction, hanging about her suffering brother, or with softly flushing cheek, talking in low, eager tones to Paul Ladue, whose melancholy eyes fairly brightened. It had been settled that he should leave them at Gordon-ville and return to the front, but at the Rappahannock his own colonel boarded the train and, noticing at once how ill and worn he looked, talked with him kindly, sympathetically, awhile, and then went off to see their division general, soon to be so famous as a corps commander. In ten minutes they were both there, the one tall, martial, and with his long, flowing beard looking more like a hero of Norseland or warrior of Aiminus than a soldier of the cavalry south. Even then, before the wrinkles and crows' feet had dug deep about the outer corners of Longstreet's eyes, queer little lines would play about them and his bearded lips when humorous fancy struck him, and kindly humor seemed never to be far from that genial face until the bitter day that cost him Pickett's grand and devoted division in Hancock's front at Gettysburg.

"I looked to see you in uniform, Miss Chilton," said he, "and I have yet to learn by what authority you have discarded the gray. And this, I believe, is the young gentleman you were personating?" whereat he shook hands very kindly with the shrinking subterfuge and thought how very near alike they were in stature. "Colonel Moore tells me you are far too ill to resume duty just yet, Mr. Ladue, so I am going to take the responsibility of bidding you go back to Charlottesville for a week of Miss Chilton's care. Ah, doctor, I'm glad to see you." And then two very distinguished Virginians were shaking hands; but all Fred Benton could see of it was the backs of subordinate officers clustered about him.
They went presently and spoke with young Chilton lying on his mattress along the tops of the seats, then came straight to the lonely officer—the only

GAINING STRENGTH.

one in blue, reclining toward the rear end of the long vehicle, the object of much silent curiosity but no intrusion whatsoever, and to the prisoner Longstreet spoke as courteously as to the princess holding her little court in mild car, bidding him be of good cheer.

"Dr. Chilton has told us, sir, of your protecting him from indignity at Centeville, and of all the kindness you did him that night, resulting in your capture. We cannot afford," and here the blue-gray eyes twinkled and the half-hidden lips twitched whimsically.
"to let so good a soldier get right back to business. Neither can we send so chivalric a foe to Libby—at least so long as he is wounded as you are.
Therefore, Dr. Chilton, you will see to his having hospital accommodations, and now, we must have a suitable guard." And here the tall general straightened up, studied earnestly the circle of soldier faces about him until the twinkling eyes rested on the very sweet and rosy features of the one damsel present. Then briefly and in official tone, he finished. "Miss Chilton, I appoint you, until further orders, custodian of Lieut. and Aide-de-Camp Benton, of the federal army."

Verily, as Benton wrote at the time, these were the halcyon days of the war, before ever it had become the grim and deadly earnest they were to know so bitterly and so very soon. The car was cleared of all save passengers, the train was started before he could find words with which to thank the courtly southern general, and the doctor, bending over him, was saying, "You must not discredit my report, sub, by looking so much alive as you do at this moment. I represented your case, sub, as one requiring constant attention, otherwise you might have had to go to Richmond."

And so for a day or two these pleasantries—these courtesies of war prevailed. Then all of Johnston's men remaining north of the Rappahannock came drifting in before a new forward move of the union force along the railway. Howard's strong division of Sumner's corps swept out in reconnaissance, even as the bulk of McClellan's army was being directed on Alexandria for the now inevitable swing to the Peninsula between the York and the James—full details of the gathering of every kind of bay and river craft reaching Johnston quite as speedily as they did New York. So that skilled soldier withdrew still further to the line of the Rapidan where he could be nearer Richmond in case of need.

Then when Banks should have come down from the Shenandoah and "covered" Washington, up sprang that restless, watchful, prayerful Virginia leader, Jackson, and so stirred the situation in the valleys that Banks and his men had to hurry back through the mountain passes, and further delays and complications arose before April set in and McClellan could sail for Fortress Monroe, and in all the bustle and excitement, the rumors flying hither and yon, the marching to and fro of cavalry and fleet-footed infantry, it happened that for full a fortnight Dr. Chilton and his patients, nurse, guard and all, had settled down to something like peace and physical comfort at cozy, homelike old Charlottesville, and no man sought seriously to hamper or disturb them. From Gainesville Dr. Chilton had penned a letter to be sent through the lines, notifying the commanding general of the union force along Bull Run of Benton's capture after gallant effort to cut his way through, in the course of which he was quite ~~possibly~~ though not dangerously wounded—that he was in good hands and would be well cared for, and this news—a great relief—was promptly transmitted to Fred's general and by him telegraphed to the far western home.

On a well-made stretcher lay the central figure of household and local interest, Lieut. Jack Chilton, slowly but surely gaining strength and spirits with every day. And who wouldn't under similar influences—for two fair young daughters of the old commonwealth vied with each other in assiduous effort to "entertain" the trooper invalid. Lovely were they both, these cousins of the blood, and most carefully had they been chosen for this special duty by their acknowledged leader, chief of the little clan of kinswomen.
Brilliant, beautiful and daring, who of their brave order could lay claim to leadership so long as Rosalie cared to hold it? They followed and obeyed her eagerly, loyally, though in years she was but 18, and five, at least, of the sacred band were her seniors.
Ever since the days of short dresses, braids and pinafores, she had been dominant among them. Tomboy had they called Rosalie at ten, for she could ride any horse within miles of Charlottesville, and preferred walking stilts, flying kites or running races to the customary allurement of girlhood.
She had one envy, one champion, one idol—her brother, barely two years her senior—and apparently but one sorrow—that she could not do everything that Jack could, and not for lack of trying.

Then as they grew older, and other girls' brothers began showing hitherto unsuspected fondness for Jack's society, and coming to see him at all hours of the day, and other girls themselves began making eyes at Jack, her indifference to the first and her fury at the second were comical to see. And then, when the war came on and Virginia sprang to arms and Jack to seadle and his first commission in Jeb Stuart's famous First cavalry, she was all afire with fervor and patriotism on the one hand and of mad jealousy of Maud Pelham on the other, for on Maud had Jack cast favoring eyes.

And so, when she brought her brother home to nurse and pet and coddle to her heart's content, while she was all soothing sweetness on the side that showed to him, she fairly bristled on the other—that which all well-favored feminine callers, inquirers and friends must needs encounter when they asked to see him. She established a regular roster book and told off the list of the sacred band—her henchwomen, into four "reliefs" of two girls each—one relief only to be on duty each day and no outsiders to be admitted. Needless to say Maud Pelham was not of the elect, and Jack speedily showed he wished it were otherwise.

And so this sweet April morning, with a soft, languorous air playing about the wooded, sun-kissed heights, she had two such awfully nice young girls to cheer him, while she herself turned dutifully to another wounded officer, a youth in dark blue and gold who had been for over an hour a silent watcher of the merriment about Chilton's cot, while he, Fred Benton, sat lonely and longing to get far away.

It was not that they were cold, constrained or inconsiderate when speaking to him, but the doctor had to be much away now; Lieut. Jack was always surrounded by his fair bodyguard; the one man Benton loved, his boon companion Paul, had gone to rejoin his regiment, and the one woman who could have made Benton's stay a world of strange, sweet, watching delight was beginning day after day to show less inclination to approach him at all. A fortnight of watching that beautiful dark face had done its work.
Fred Benton was mending in body, but not in mind, for doubly now was he a prisoner.

No Need to Be Jealous.

Senator Depew tells of a conversation between two men of his acquaintance, one of whom is the husband of an exceptionally handsome woman.

It appears that one evening after dinner the second man remarked to the proud husband at a moment when the beauty's attention was given elsewhere, "Old man, your wife is such a beautiful creature that I wonder you are not jealous of her."

"To tell you the truth, I am," answered the husband, frankly and with fine disregard of the attempt of his friend to be facetious. "For that reason I never invite any one here that any sane woman could take a fancy to."

Dentist-Monk and the Pope.

"I have drawn 2,000,644 teeth," said the dentist-monk of Rome recently before his death.

No charge was made, and the priest worked in the open air in the garden of his monastery, and used no instruments but his thumb and forefinger.
Leo XIII. was one of his clients, and Pope Plus IX. said to him once:

"Dear brother, I should like very much to have a tooth pulled by you."

"Oh, Holy Father!"

"But it is impossible."

"Oh! Why?" said the monk.

"Because," returned the pope quietly, "I have none left to pull."—Rome

One Fatal Objection.

"I have considered your proposal," said Mrs. Binks, the builder's widow, to the expectant suitor, Mr. Jerry; "and I admit that your personal qualifications are above reproach, whilst your business knowledge would, I have no doubt, be useful in carrying on my late husband's trade as a going concern." "Yes," was the reply. "But there is one fatal objection. Our present sign-board would have to be altered, and I am afraid it would not be to our advantage to change it from "Binks, builder," to "Jerry, builder."

FINE GARMENTS PRODUCED

A Little Talk About Spring Hats and Jackets—The Vital Relation of the Sleeve to the Dress.

THE sumptuous-looking garments shown in the accompanying cut were made from remnants picked up here and there at end-of-winter sales. The shop-keepers desire to close out old stock for new purchasers are very glad to obtain pretty things for a song.

If you wish to carry on your wave of economy, of course you will not take your remnants to an expensive dress-maker, but at home will endeavor to utilize the odds and ends bought "because they were so cheap;" perhaps there is a waist length here, a short three yards of lace there, a bit of inserting, some embroidery, you scarcely know what to do with. One of the best ways to use such an assortment is in the making of the little dressing sacks and shirt waists, and sometimes an evening waist can be concocted that is surprisingly modish—and surprisingly unskimped.

Bits of lace and fine thin stuffs, both insertings and embroidery, may be put to good use for the chemisettes, undersleeves and deep cuffs now obtaining, as well as for effective bits of trimming on sack or waist. Lace is always property and kept long enough will prove its value. Nets are so much in favor to-day that a few yards cannot fail to come in well for something; we suggest a fancy waist of net made up over chiffon (a-remnant, of course), and worn over an underslip of colored silk. A remnant of flannel will make a bedroom jacket, and this may be trimmed with a collar built up of bits of lace remnants.

Often the remnants are shop-worn, very far from clean, but if one is capable and can clean the articles at home there is decided economy in buying things that have lost their first freshness. For instance, take a short length of soiled blue wash-silk, give it a tubbing and a careful ironing with an iron not too hot; then lay a pattern on and see if there is enough for a dressing-sack. No, there is not enough fullness, and everybody knows a scant sack is impossible. Suppose you cut it out as best you can, and where it needs width employ "ribbon lacing." The effect will be even better than if just the right amount of silk had been used.

Fashion is kindly just at present and lends itself to the needs of the bargain woman. If you have not enough material for long sleeves, the fashionable elbow sleeve is better anyway. Filmy cuffs may help out any short waist length, whether of wool, silk or cotton, and the "tucker" also gives a fraction of aid. Deep girdles will cover shortcomings at the waist line, a fancy vest can be inserted if the waist be too narrow. For once, Dame Fashion is friendly to the needy.

Make your girdle with a sharply-pointed front to give the effect liked now of small waist, clear outline. We hear rumors that the girdle has had its day, but as yet there are no serious indications that such is the case. The narrow belt was with us such a long period the girdle in justice should have a little more show.

Signs are rife that spring hats are to be smaller, that the great picture hat is to be ousted. The polo turban probably will be very popular the coming summer, a neat close affair very different from the wide head-gear of recent years. This turban is trimmed very simply, sometimes only a bunch of flowers.

Promise is given that taffeta jackets worn with odd skirts are to be much the thing this spring, and if the promise be fulfilled the fashion will be a boon to many that have found it very expensive to try to have a coat matching every skirt. Although the redingote is in vogue, the Eton blouse is not to vanish; one new design for the latter was lately shown, the Eton having short rounded basques and a surplice front. The surplice is by no means confined to waists, but will be seen on many spring coats.

Sleeves Make or Mar Dress

CERTAIN that your sleeves are right, you can feel quite comfortable. They are not all to be cut from one pattern, but should follow the same general principles; bigness, and bigness at the top.

One fashion authority declares seamstresses the country over are now engaged in turning last season's sleeves upside down, and while this is a rather emphatic statement yet it is considerable truth about it. We are glad to say that this topsy-turvy treatment of sleeves is comparatively simple, last year's fullness at the wrist easily lending itself to this year's fullness at the shoulder. And another readily effected change is made by utilizing the late approved blousing at the belt for pushing the bodice up higher to make the present approved short yoke. Also see to it, you that are to remodel, that the shoulder-line is not so long; usually this can be accomplished by a little change of trimming, and sometimes by setting the sleeves up higher. If one finds the waist shortened too much by pushing up the yoke, see if one of the broad girdles, still very much in evidence, will not hide this defect.

But to return to our theme, sleeves. The ones illustrated were designed for the fashionable lingerie blouses, all save the most severe-appearing one, made of light-weight material. A very pretty model, and exceedingly modish, is that trimmed about the puff with inserting band edged with frills and having a deep cuff likewise finished off with ruffles. This trimming may be either of fine embroidery or of Valenciennes lace. Embroidery promises to be more worn this season than it has been in a long time. Another sleeve in which the cuff extends over the upper part in gauntlet fashion, and another attractive one, has the fullness unconfined. The strap on the cuff may be used or omitted, just as suits the taste.

The sleeve on the leg-of-mutton order has a band of inserting along the seam and tucks extending out a short distance from the seam. To hold out the sleeves at the shoulder various devices are tried; some dressmakers run short tucks just at the shoulder line a short distance, not more than four inches; sometimes narrow inserting is set in to run down in a sharp point; sometimes Y-shaped fine tucking extends out a short distance from the upper armhole. Do not employ any trimming that will interfere with the square-shouldered effect we must all zealously strive for now.

Lace buttons and buttons of pearl are used on the deep cuffs, it being almost impossible to make these fit save by the more or less troublesome means of buttoning and unbuttoning. One must be willing to take a little pains if she intends to wear the fashionable long cuff. And that reminds us that the stores are at last offering for sale the separate deep lace cuffs with collar to match; and these are to be had in the pretty and inexpensive machine-made Irish crochet as well as in the costly handmade lace.

ELLEN OSMONDE.

Sir Beaumont Before Public.
The appointment of Vice Admiral Sir Lewis A. Beaumont, former commander in chief of the Australian station, as British representative on the North Sea commission, brought a well-known soldier into prominence. Admiral Beaumont is known in America, having married a daughter of Charles G. Perkins, of Boston. Admiral Beaumont has had a long and enviable career in the British naval service. As a lieutenant he was decorated with the arctic medal upon his return from the arctic expedition of 1875-76. He was also promoted, and in 1882 was appointed naval attaché for Europe. Soon afterward he became private secretary to Lord Northbrook, then first lord of the admiralty, in which capacity he went to Egypt in 1884. Seven years later he was promoted to commodore of the first class, and for two years he commanded the training squadron. In 1894 he was appointed director of naval intelligence, and after serving as aide-camp to the late Queen Victoria for a short time was promoted rear admiral in 1897. In the following year he was given command of the Pacific fleet.

Unaccustomed Sweetness.
The new minister was taking dinner at the Smiths on the occasion of his first visit to that household. A man of grave and dignified bearing, a few moments of his presence had served to instill into the minds of his host and hostess a proper idea of the solemnity of the occasion. Little Willy, however, was not so easily impressed, and from the beginning of the meal had been vainly trying to restrain unmistakable evidence of amusement.

Noticing a peculiar look upon the face of the clerical visitor, and ascribing it to annoyance at the ill-concealed emotions of his son, Mr. Smith commanded sharply: "Willy! Less laughing, or you must leave the table."

"I can't help it, for the new minister looks so funny. He went and salted his soup from the sugar-shake."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Island of Heligoland.

The island of Heligoland is surrounded by a great number of treacherous rocks and cliffs and every year witnesses the stranding of many fishing boats or sailing vessels. A cemetery has now been created in the neighborhood of the great dunes, where the bodies of fishermen and sailors washed ashore find their last resting place.

No Fear of Tesla's Threat.

Mr. Tesla, the picturesque electrician, who has suggested a great many mighty schemes, few of which have come to any great result, says his latest invention will send battleships to the junk heap. Yet work upon such costly craft is not likely to wholly stop as a consequence of Tesla's assertions.—Troy Times.

Finland Bridal Dress.

In rural Finland a bride wears to church a curious combination of wedding veil and wedding bonnet. It is a great cap with ribbon streamers behind, and in front a fall of lace which shadows the face. Over her dark cashmere dress she ties a handsomely embroidered white apron.

Quick Cure of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills—How They Saved the Shop of a Kansas Blacksmith—Cure Was Permanent Too.

Goodland, Kan., Feb. 20th.—(Special)—So quick and complete was the cure of N. E. Albertson, a local blacksmith, that it almost seems like a miracle. He had Rheumatism so bad he feared he would have to give up his shop. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills drove away all the pains and they have never returned. Speaking of his cure, Mr. Albertson says: "I had Rheumatism in my shoulders and arms for years. Part of the time it was so bad I could not sleep at night. My arm hurt so that it seemed I would have to give up my blacksmith shop. I went to the drug store and bought one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and took them. I have not had the Rheumatism since. A great many of the neighbors are using Dodd's Kidney Pills since they saw how they cured me."

Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs. Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth.

When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 Garfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great medicine for women that I should not have been alive to-day. It is splendid for women, old or young, and will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

YOU'RE NEEDED

The section traversed by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Ry. is very comprehensive. From St. Louis, Hannibal or Kansas City to Galveston or San Antonio is a stretch of over one thousand miles of territory, capable of sustaining a population many times that of the present. A thousand industries, soil of various degrees of fertility, a wonderful produce of plants and crops, oil, gas and minerals are to be found. Peopled by eager, pushing, wide-awake citizens who believe in the future of the Southwest and see the virtue of encouraging enterprises of every description and of getting more and better business, the opportunity is apparent.

The Southwest is really in need of nothing save people. More men are needed—you're needed. There are vast areas of unimproved land—land not yielding the crops of which it is capable. The same thing in a different way is true of the towns. Few lines of business are adequately represented. There are openings for mills and manufacturing plants, small stores, banks, newspapers and lumber yards. The oil and gas fields of Kansas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma are practically new and offer wonderful opportunities for development along commercial lines.

THE OPPORTUNITY IS NOW

The M. K. & T. has no lands for sale, we are simply interested in the upbuilding of the country. We believe in the Southwest, and know that with its present needs and opportunities, the prospects are brighter and the future more hopeful than in the older and more densely populated States. We want you to investigate conditions and satisfy yourself of the truthfulness of this.

On February 7th and 21st and March 7th and 21st, the M. K. & T. Ry. will sell excursion tickets from St. Louis, Hannibal and Kansas City to Indian Territory, Oklahoma and Central and Eastern Texas, at

$15 For the Round Trip

You should take advantage of this opportunity to see the Southwest for yourself. We are in possession of all sorts of information valuable alike to the investor and homeseeker. If you are interested, tell us what you want, how much you have to invest and we will gladly furnish the information.
